Disparities in Racial and Ethnic Health Care exist because of inequalities in social, economic, physical, environmental and educational aspects of an individual's world. Their lives are impacted by poverty, access to healthcare, exposure to environmental problems, education level, behavioral factors, ethnicity, and some cases, the legal or judicial system.

The 2021 Bryan Women and Children's Conference will introduce participants to a few of these topics to gain an awareness of the racial and ethnic disparities impacting the women and children for whom we provide care.
